

Nursing, tech students want to break from DSA

By Ken Coleman, Joseph Hain and M.L. Skarney

Student dissatisfaction at Corvallis College's three campus tech centers is on the rise.

Public relations for the expansion of nursing and technology students from the three Corvallis tech centers have been contentious since the first week in April.

The problem with the three centers is that the students (both nursing and technology students) are not getting the same quality of education as the students at the main campus.
